Background of the Welsh National Anthem

Historical Origins

The anthem's roots date back to the early 19th century, a period marked by the Romantic movement's fascination with folk traditions. The melody that now accompanies the anthem was first composed in 1816 by James James, a Welsh-born composer who spent much of his life in the United States. Though the tune was originally intended for a different set of words, its soaring, pastoral quality captured the imagination of the Welsh people.

Composer and Lyricist

While James James created the music, the lyrics were penned by James James himself, drawing upon the traditional Welsh language. The first line, "Hen Wlad Fy Nhadau," translates to "Old Land of My Fathers." The words quickly gained popularity and became associated with Welsh pride and patriotism. Over time, the anthem evolved into its present form, with a standard three-stanza structure that is widely recognized across Wales and beyond.
